FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Facility 37* Private Demo Launching This October

Independent developers Arzolath™ (Lead Developer) and IOFreakHack are excited to announce that a private demo of their upcoming co-op horror survival game, Facility 37, will be available in October 2025.

In Facility 37, players explore an abandoned research facility, uncover evidence of horrific experiments, and attempt to escape alive. Each run features randomized objectives, unpredictable threats, and atmospheric environments designed to test teamwork and survival instincts. With voice chat fully integrated, every sound matters, teammates can hear you, but so can the monsters.

The private demo will give players an early chance to:

- Play with up to 5 players in online co-op
- Complete randomized objectives while evading bio-engineered threats
- Experience voice-driven gameplay where enemies react to noise
- Explore atmospheric environments filled with psychological horror

"Facility 37 isn't just about jump scares - it's about building tension, paranoia, and forcing players to survive together under constant pressure," said Arzolath™, Lead Developer of Facility 37.

The demo will be invite-only, with keys provided to select content creators, press, and early participants. Players can follow development and wishlist the game on Steam:

About Facility 37

Hidden deep underground lies an abandoned research facility where unspeakable experiments were conducted. Something went wrong, and now only fragments remain - records, shadows, and the monsters left behind. Survivors who enter rarely return.

Facility 37 is an atmospheric co-op horror experience where players must work together to survive randomized objectives, bio-engineered threats, and environments designed to keep them on edge.

- Platform: PC (Steam)
 - Players: 1–5 (online co-op)
 - Demo: October 2025 (invite-only)
